

You only need three files to replicate the results: the data file, the code file and the R project file.

Steps for full replication:

1. Download the files and store them on your computer.
2. Open the project in R Studio.
3. Open the code file.
4. Run the code. All the packages required for running the code will be installed automatically. Should you encounter difficulties with running parts of the code, this could be due to special compatibility issues with some R packages.
